Ticks Make Early Appearance!

Yes, deer ticks have managed to make an early appearance in the area and a sudden start to the tick-borne disease season, due to the mild winter! It's time for Minnesotans to begin their efforts to protect themselves from ticks and the diseases they carry.

This type of tick carries the agents of several diseases, including Lyme disease, human anaplasmosis, babesiosis, Powassan disease, and a new form of human ehrlichiosis. Over the last decade, 1,000 to 2,000 or more combined cases of these tick-borne diseases each year have been reported to the Minnesota Department of Health, with these numbers increasing in recent years.

The risk for diseases from blacklegged ticks in Minnesota usually starts to rise in late spring and stays elevated until mid-summer, with a smaller peak again in autumn. Blacklegged ticks carry most of Minnesota's tick-borne diseases. In addition, American dog ticks ("wood ticks"), which are very common in spring and early summer throughout Minnesota, can carry Rocky Mountain spotted fever (RMSF). While RMSF is most common in the southern United States, a small number of RMSF cases, including one death, have occurred in Minnesotans who did not travel outside the state. And don't forget about your family pets. Ticks can host our furry friends, but there are many effective products on the market to protect them as well. Consult with your veterinarian for the best route for you and your pet. Keep in mind that our furry friends can also act as transportation from yard to home!

The best way to prevent tick bites is to avoid tick habitat during warm weather months:

- Wooded or brushy areas for the blacklegged tick
- Grassy or wooded areas for the American dog tick

If you can't avoid tick habitat, use repellent to reduce the risk of disease:

- DEET-based repellents (up to 30 percent DEET), which can be applied to clothing or skin for temporary protection
- Permethrin-based repellents, which are used to pre-treat fabric and can protect against tick bites for at least two weeks without reapplication

People who live on heavily wooded property, whether permanent homes or cabins, often encounter ticks on a daily basis. Since daily repellent use can be more challenging for these people, they should consider the following landscape management techniques:

To make your yard less attractive to ticks:

- Keep lawns mowed short
- Remove leaves and brush
- Create a landscape barrier of wood chips or rocks between mowed lawns and woods

Early detection of tick-borne illness is important to prevent severe complications, so people should seek medical care if they develop an illness suggestive of a tick-borne disease after spending time in tick habitat. Signs and symptoms of the various tick-borne diseases can include, but are not limited to, rash, fever, headache, fatigue, muscle aches, joint pain or swelling, and facial droop. These symptoms can also be involved in other diseases, so it is important for a patient's medical provider to consider tick-borne and non-tick-borne causes. Rockville Remember...
